FINE PICTURE COMING

In no picture has the effect of costume been better demonstrated than in Rosemary Climbs the Heights," featuring Mary Miles Minter and shown at the local theatre on Friday, May 8th. Miss Minter enters the story in the simplest garb of the village girl and daughter of the struggling old father, a descendent of old and settled Holland stock. Because of Rosemary's talent for carving clever dolls, she attracts the attention of a party of city artists in general, and a young and handsome composer in particular. She transported into the whilr of city life. In her attic, for costume ball, Miss Minter is said to wear one of the most elaborately made, dresses ever shown on the screen... The lace is precious satin is of the kind we no longer can buy anywhere and has been treasured by Miss Minter's mother until just such an opportunity and the beadwork was designed by the great Poiret. "Rosemary's" costume is that of Juliet. Alan Forest, as "Ricardo," the composer and lover, gives a fine impersonation of Romeo. Miss Minter used to take Shakespearien parts in private theatricals and always had a leaning toward Juliet.

IMPORTANT POINTS OF TO THE GERMANS TREATY HUNS WILL SIGN

(By Associated Press)

Paris, May 7—The peace treaty delivered to the Germans at Versailles today is the longest ever drawn. It provides that if the governments named agree, the United States and Great Britain will immediately come to the assistance of France in case of an unprovoked attack by Germany.

It does not deal with questions affecting Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey except insofar as binding Germany to accept any agreement reached with those former allies.

Germany, by the terms of the treaty make peace with her.

The terms are contained in the treaty of some 80,000 words in length which was handed to the German plenipotentiaries at a memorable assemblage here, attended by delegates of 27 nations which are parties to the peace pact.

The notable document on which the leading statesmen of the various nations have been working together with a swarm of experts from the principal countries involved since the principal countries involved since the convening of the peace conference, January 8th, it introduced by an extensive preamble, embodying the assertion of the authority upon which the treaty is based.

Immediately following the first chapter is the text of the League of Nations, the text of which has already been printed.

Of the fourteen principal sections, one contains stipulations with regard to frontiers which materially changes the map of Europe.

one contains stipulations with regard to frontiers which materially changes the map of Europe.

Military, naval and air terms are dealt with in another section, while still another is devoted to the subject of reparations.

Political stipulations for Europe on the one hand and outside of it on the other, are dealt with in separate divisions of the document.

The treaty, it is noted, has to do with Germany alone, except insofar as it is required that she accept the agreements made by the allies with the other Central Powers.

The terms of the treaty will spell the end of Germany as a military power. She is deprived of virtually all her fleet; her army is cut down to nominal dimensions and she is sharply ly restricted along lines through which she might seek to work militaryly to rehabilitate herself.

Economically, also, the future of Germany is hedged about with stipulations intended to insure her ability to pay the indemnity demanded by the allies, but to prevent her from exploiting her old-time resources as strangling competitor of the nations about her, which she overran and devastated during the war.
